Candy,

At this time, please maintain confidentiality as appropriate.

I believe that an individual who is a resident of Puyallup may be about to sell personal information including the names, date of birth, and Social Security numbers of nine individuals to a Seattle area resident who has a documented history of publishing such information on the Internet.

I am involved in civil litigation in California Superior Court against Brent A. Hanson, a resident of the Seattle area. Causes in the civil litigation include invasion of privacy for publishing on multiple websites my personal identity including my full name, Social Security number, and date of birth. The California court has ordered Hanson to stop publication of my personal identification.

As part of the civil litigation, in November 2007 I hired Seattle area private investigator Patrick Mobley. I found Mobley from an advertisement on Craigslist. The investigator provided information regarding Hanson such as home address, employment, etc. The investigator arranged for service of process on Hanson. The investigator provided correspondence purported to be retrieved from Hanson's trash, and in one instance provided an affidavit affirming the trash source of a document. All payments for Mobley's services were made through PayPal to an account owned by the investigator's partner, Michelle Colbern. It is my understanding that Mobley and Colbern have married.

I occasionally provide investigative consulting for attorneys regarding medical related litigation. As part of an investigation unrelated to Hanson, in late August 2008 I requested background reports on several individuals from Mobley. I provided Mobley the name, date of birth, and Social Security number of nine individuals, all residents of California. The reports were never provided and I was unable to reach Mobley for an extended period of time. I sought a refund through PayPal for the cost of the reports, however the account of Mobley's partner was subsequently closed and no refunds were provided.

In early November 2008, I was contacted by Mobley who stated the reason for his absence was that he had been incarcerated. Due to the unsuccessful business transaction regarding the background checks and the fact that the investigator had been arrested and jailed, I ceased future business with Mobley.

On the 21st of December 2008 I received an affidavit from Hanson that he had been contacted anonymously by a person who claimed to have been my investigator and that this anonymous person offered to sell Hanson 138 documents and correspondence between Mobley and me. The content of the affidavit indicates that Hanson has already received some documents from Mobley. The Hanson affidavit states that the anonymous investigator had a "falling out" with me in early November of 2008 and the communications would implicate me in criminal activity. I have not been involved in any criminal activity with or without Mobley.

I fear that Mobley will sell to Hanson the correspondence between Mobley and me, including the names, dates of birth, and Social Security numbers of the individuals for whom I sought background investigations. Hanson has demonstrated a willingness to make available individual's Social Security numbers on the Internet and, in fact, has a current injunctive order halting such activity.
